Had your house "perfumigated" yet?

Maybe it wouldn't have occurred if the alleys had been kept clean.

Now that the worst is practically over we are free to admit that we were more scared than hurt.

Wouldn't it make a real old-fashioned case of smallpox mad to be compared with this mollycoddle kind?

Brother Patten's corner reminds us that there are modes of making bread rise other than yeast and salt-rising.

After his recent numerous changes of residence Brother Castro is doubtless able to sympathize with our friends of the Methodist clergy.

After Frank Beefsteak had procured a marriage license at Steubenville Tuesday his girl backed out because of his name. This was both rare and well done—but tough.

They're having a bit of a shindy in Constantinople, but the authorities can be congratulated on not having to contend with our impulsive friends, Col. Beach Hargis and the Hon. Crazy Snake.

Mayhap smallpox be no joking matter, but, when we realize that whole families can have it and recover without knowing they're sick, 'tis difficult to restrain the smile that all unbidden starts.

Willie Stoner, a sixteen-year-old Henry county boy, was sent to the state industrial school last week after drawing a revolver upon his mother when she asked him to get a load of stove wood. It's dollars to the holt in a doughnut that little Willie's parents ought to be sent to some school also.

The Charleston News and Courier says that they have a kind of blind tiger liquor in Atlanta of which one swallow will make one spring. That isn't in it with the Hillsboro bootleg brand, one swallow of which has frequently been known to result in a number of falls.

If we were given to vanity we'd feel all puffed up because of the frequent copying of our editorial paragraphs by the Cincinnati Enquirer (with credit of course) and other papers. It is proof that they know they are made at home and not furnished by a syndicate.

Gov. Harmon's recent openly expressed opposition to the Panama canal indicates either that he isn't as far-sighted and level-headed as he has been thought, or that he doesn't want the presidency anyway and consequently cares nothing for the opinions of his southern co-partisans.

That indefinable something that makes "The Old Oaken Bucket" the favorite song of the late stayers at a lodge social has prompted the choral societies of the West and Northwest to cut out Omaha as the place of holding their big saengerfest because the lid goes on there now at 8 p. m.

An exchange offers the following timely advice to raisers of chickens and garden truck: "You should not allow you onions and other garden truck to run at large on the streets or trespass upon your neighbor's chickens. All out of doors belongs to the chickens and you should keep your garden at home."

If the housewives of the country are only game enough to do it they can knock Patten's wheat corner higher than the kite of the celebrated Mr. Gilderoy. Wheaten bred is not an absolute necessity. Corn bred is not only cheaper but more wholesome. Wheat bread costs more than it is worth at its cheapest. Corn bred is worth more than it costs at its dearest.

The citizens of an Oklahoma town, displeased with the inability or unwillingness of the courts to deal rightly with four offending cattle barons, gently took them from the care of a cruel jailer early Monday morning, and affectionately leading them to an adjacent barn, gave them a lift the result of which, it is safe to predict, will be salutary and lasting. Other barons might profit by their example.

The Georgetown News-Democrat opines that the small boy—presumably the naughty small boy—does not join in the apprehensions of the hardwood interests as to the hickory supply being exhausted.

The editor of the Dover (Ky.) News will have the sympathy of many. Listen: "We planted a bed of onion sets one day last week and they are up already. Somebody's chickens scratched them up. We have planted them again. If they are scratched up we will plant the hens next time and let the onion sets scratch them awhile."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS-HERALD.

The tariff bill, having passed the House, has just been reported out of the Senate Finance Committee and is now before the Senate. After it passes the Senate there will be no chance to amend it, inasmuch as the only matters in conference between the House and Senate will be the amendments made to the bill by the Senate, consequently all parties wishing to express themselves concerning this legislation, producers and consumers alike, should promptly acquaint their Senators with such information and opinions as would be of value in the adjustment of schedules and provisions, especially those in which constituents may feel a special interest.

Mrs. J. B. Hawk, of Blanchester, a former resident of this place, died last Thursday as the result of a stroke of apoplexy. She has been living with her son, Edwin, who conducts the Hotel Bindley at that place. Her husband was the late James Hawk, who for many years conducted the Hotel Parker here. The body was brought here Saturday morning and interment was made in the Hillsboro cemetery.
